Hike Report - Shoreline:
I think we might be getting into that time of the year in Northern California when all the days are the same: warm temps, blue skies, bright sun. That time when a young male duck's fancy turns to thoughts of love. In a few weeks the Canada goslings will be over-running the place! Hey, I'm not complaining, mind you!

We had more than a dozen on the hiking trails out to our "bench-mark" in the Baylands, and more than a dozen were already waiting for us back at the café. There is a movement afoot to have a late morning hike after coffee. If you're more of late-morning person than an early-morning person, ask around at coffee next week to see if anyone wants to go walking. These days are just too beautiful to stay home!

Request for volunteers!
Planning for the dance actually began on the walk this morning, so if you'd like to help, let us know (age-of-aquinas@paloaltocatholic.org) and we'll put you in touch.

Coming up: Next week is another Shoreline hike, and the regular first-Saturday Edgewood hike. AND a special International Year of Astronomy event -- a star party at Foothill College Observatory. See below for details. And for a complete rundown on all the upcoming happenings, visit: http://paloaltocatholic.org/aofa.html.
